son westward was known as the Atchison and Pike's Peak Railroad until it was unloaded on the Union Pacific in 1879 by Jay Gouldin his grand consolidation scheme. It never paid the interest on its debt, which it had funded at semething like $630,000 prior to the consolidation, and its stock was selling as low as $50 a share. This road, which, with its feeders, embraced a system of about three bundred miles, was gobbled up by Gould, who paid as high as $250 per share for its stock. The wily financier lost nothing by the transaction, for he turned in the road in the consolidation scheme at exactly the same figure which he had paid, and reserved the right to lease it to his Missouri Pacific system This he did and it has ever since been a part of that system, paying to the Union Pacific its net carnings for a rental, and providing a particarnings for a rental, and providing a parti-cularly good thing for Gould on his St. Louis haul.

a rival system at a nominal rental. Mr. Nichols, who was the treasurer of the road at the time of its transfer, was accordingly summoned as a witness.

The session room of the Commission was lined with ominous looking black boxes, which bore appropriate inscriptions announcing their contents to be the testimony nouncing their contents to be the testimony taken, and documents and accounts submitted and gathered in the six months which lave been devoted to the arduous labors of the investigation. Their arrangement on the shelves gave a suggestion of caskets stowed away in a vault and that idea was helghtened by the remembrance that many of them contained the buried hopes of the stockholders of the Kansas Pacific—hopes buried in the Gould consolidation scheme.

All the members of the Commission were present, and the first matter considered by them was a telegram from ex-Gov. Leland Stanford, of California, suggesting a manner of settlement of the differences between the ciovernment and the Central Pacific Railroad. He said:

tiovernment and the Central Pacific Railroad. He said:

I desire to suggest that the commission report in favor of the appointment of a proper court to consider the equities existing between the Government and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as inquired into in accordance with the act of Congress, approved March 3, issī, and render final Judgment thereon. Then the question what further legislation may be needed can be fairly considered. I consider that the act of Congress directing inquiry into the equities erects a different standard by which to measure the relations between the railway company and the Government from the purely legal relation theretofore existing.

This proposition was smilingly received and entered upon the minutes of the Commission, and attention was turned to Witness mission, and attention was turned to Witness Nichols, who had entered.

Nichols, who had entered.

He is a tall man, with a sparse growth of gray hair ineffectually striving to hide a growing baldness, and when not engaged in reading, his bright eyes are shaded by a pair of extensive gold-bowed spectacles.

Mr. Nichols desired to make what he called a clear and concise statement, giving the

The witness's evidence, giving the history of the road, was in the nature of an argument. He cited the act of Congress to show that the consolidation of the road with the Hannibal and St. Jo road was authorized, as was the final extension of the road to connect with the Union Pacific at the one hundredth with the Union Pacific at the one hundredth with the Union Pacine at the meridian.

Argument was had before Solicitor-General Phillips in 1873, Mr. Nichols, Benjamin R. Curtis and Wm. M. Evarts appearing for the extension, and it was decided that the road had a right to extend and receive the Government lands and bonds, and General Grant, then President, approved the map by affixing his signature.

in his desk, referring the matter to Secre-tary Boutwell, and there it remains to this day. I went to Gen. Grant and asked nim what was the trouble and he showed me nin what was the trouble and he showed me the piece of the map containing his signature and told me not to be disturbed."

The witness became excited as he reverted to the wrongs that had been heaped upon him and his friends in the matter of the extension of this road, and he punctuated his statements with decided periods, indented upon the surface of the table with a goodly-sized fist.

Commissioner Anderson suggested that the map was recalled by President Grant be-cause it was discovered that the Atchison and cause it was discovered that the Atchison and Pike's Peak road had no right, under the act of 1862, to extend further than 100 miles beyond Atchison, whereupon Mr. Nichols triumphantly turned to the text of the act to prove that the Kansas Pacific was to connect with his road at that point, and, failing to do so, the Atchison and Pike's Peak road might extend.

Mr. Nichols said that his interest in the road was $10.000, or about one tenth.

its real value. It included the stock of all the branch roads, so that it was really sold for 62% per cent."
Q. Before the sale to Mr. Gould did not the stock sell in the market as low as 60? A. Yes; as low as 15.

Q. Three months after the sale did it not sell as low as 160? A. I do not know. low as 166? A. I do not know.

Among other counsel employed by the road in Washington, Mr. Nichols named William M. Evarts, Benjamin R. Curtis, the late Vice-President Hendricks and ex-Senator Keverdy

Johnson.

Commissioner Littler — Your case must have failed from want of efficient counsel.

To satisfy the commission with reference to the cost of construction, Mr. Nichols stated the available assets of the company to be $4.200,000, and proceeded to enumerate the other charges, such as counsel fees, $100,000; loans, $100,000, and interest on bonds, $150,000, the total being deducted. This statement showed the construction charge to be apparently $2.800,000.

Commissioner Anderson—This sum or a part of it might have gone into the pockets of the directors.

Q. Did you ever receive the proceeds of any United States or other bonds in connection with this road? A. Never. I sold a great many bonds at an average of 99 cents, and always turned the money into the treasury of the road.

Being unable to secure an accurate statenent of the cost of construction, Commis-ioner Anderson asked for an estimate from he witness. He said that $110 per ton was paid for iron rails where steel rails could now be obtained for from $35 to $40, and rolling stock and everything else was in proportion. He was a lawyer and not a practical railroad man, but believed that the road must have cost at least $50,000 per mile.

GORMAN AND HIGGINS ALARMED.

Democratic Clerks Told to go to Baltimore but Republicans Must Stay Away. [SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]

Washington, Oct. 25,-Senator Gorman ame over from Baltimore yesterday, and had a long conference with Eugene Higgins, to arrange for the transportation of Maryland clerks in the departments, to vote in Baltimore to-morrow. Mr. Gorman has lost his confident air, and expressed himfelf as apprehensive of the result. The situation is desperate for the ring Democrats in Baltimore, and their friends here are in a gloomy frame of mind.

Advertisements appeared in the evening papers here yesterday informing Democratic voters where they can get free tickets. Eot only is this done, but the men in the departments have been told that they are expected to vote. This, however, only refers to the Democrats.

The few Republican office-holders who are still left here and who vote in Baltimore have also been notified that the vengeance of the "Ring" will be visited upon them if they leave their desks on Wednesday.

Conservative men, who have been watching the Baltimore canvass closely, say that the Gorman ring will be beaten by at least two thousand majority.

The natives cat it because they like it. Even when fish are plentiful it usually forms part of the evening meal, as the many cleanly stripped larch logs near every hut testify. They know by experience that the fact of their eating wood arouses the sympathies of strangers, and shrewdily use it to excite pity and to obtain a gift of tea and tobacco. They scrape off the thick layers immediately under the log, and, chopping it fine, mix it with snow. It is then boiled in a kettle. An Able Western Snake Story.

(From the Kanens City Times.) About four months ago Mrs. Lettes, wife of a farmer near Lathrop, Mo., was in the garden with her son, when two snakes were seen fighting, with her son, when two snakes were seen fighting, and she told her son to kill them. Taking the hoe he mashed both their heads, Mrs. Lettes intently watching him all the time. October 10 twins were born to Mrs. Lettes. The heads of both were flat and resembled those of snakes, while their forked tongues shoot out constantly. No attempt has been made to dress the monstrosities and they have been kept in separate boxes. The moment they are put together they commence to fight and shoot out their tongues in the most horrible manner. They are at this time alive and well.

Wisdom from the Young.

One day a little girl about five years old heard a reacher praying most justily, until the roof fairly rang with the strength of his supplications. Turn-ing to her mother, and beckoning the maternal ear down to a speaking piace, she whispered: "Mamma, don't you think that if he lived nearer God he wouldn't have to talk so loud."

Judge Allen's Action in the Noted Case Left for the Full Court to Decide. [SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.]

Bostov Oct 25 - In the Supreme Court this morning Judge Charles Allen announced his decision in the Lynn Banner boy case, which, it will be remembered, is a bill in equity brought by Patrick P. Sherry vs. Messrs. Perkins and Leach, President and Secretary of the Lynn Lasters' Protective Union, for an injunction restraining the defendants from placing a boy with a banner in front of the plaintiff's shoe manu-factory in Lynn warning lasters away on account of a strike which has been inaugur-ated at the shop of the plaintiff because the latter had decided to run his business on the ated at the shop of the plaintif because the co-operative plan.

Judge Allen said that he made a finding of facts substantially as alleged by the plaintiff, and that he would report the case to the full Court, as the question of law to be considered must be decided in the light of all recent decisions in this country and England.

Mr. Lund, of counsel for the plaintiff, asked the Court to issue a preliminary injunction, but Judge Allen said that he did not wish to issue an injunction; the full Court would soon meet—the first of next week—and the matter had been standing so long that the additional delay cannot make any difference in the condition of affairs; besides, the injury resulting from carrying the banner up and down the street was not so serious as to be likely to damage the plaintiff to any great extent between now and the time when the full Court meets.

The Anarchists in the Order hurt it. They saw from the conduct of the recent convention towards them that they have little to hope for while Powderly and his friends remain in control, and they have concluded to make a fuss. Powderly expected it and is prepared to meet it. If these men abandon the Order at once it will eventually strengthen it, not weaken it.

EASTLAND, Tex., Oct. 25.—The farm of J. D. Wright is for sale and in less than ten days he will be banished from town, where he has always had the reputation of a straightforward, industrious citizen, and where he and his family have made a happy home.

Wright at first refused to give any reason for going away, but under pressure tells this story: A few nights since a squad of men, all armed, rode up on horseback in front of his door and called him out to his yard fence to give them some directions. They then overpowered and blindfolded him and carried him about a mile from his house, laid him down on his face and, with pistols cocked and threats of death if he spoke or should resist, with ropes and sticks severely beat and whipped him. The corporeal punishment over, they told Wright he must leave the country by Nov. 15 or they would surely hang him to a tree in his own yard. He was given to understand that it was no idle threat, but that his life depended on flight. culiar circumstances. She was arraigned in Justice Wanser's court, in that city, this morning, charged with swindling a gullible New Yorker named Richard Sandstrum. The officers who arrested her discovered evidence in the shape of hundreds of pawn-tickets which plainly show that the woman in company with Adolph Mannheim, the man she lives with, has been swindling for years, and is probably wanted by the metropolitan police.

Sandstrum advertised in a city paper for a situation and received a card from Mrs. De Sanvage, directing him to call at 669 Summit avenue, Jersey City. He did so, and found the woman in charge of an intelligence office. She told him that $2.50 must be paid in advance, but that a situation was waiting for him. It took a week for him to realize that he had been swindled. She went to the police with her story and Mrs. De Sauvage's place was raided. The pawn-tickets found there are for articles of value, such as jewelry, and were issued mostly by New York shops. Mrs. De Sauvage and Mannheim were both arrested and committed for trial.

Bad for Janitor Smith. pleeding from bullet wounds near the New York Bay shore in Jersey City yesterday, has told a Bay shore in Jersey City yesterday, has told a story seriously affecting Charles Smith, the janitor of the Jersey City Yacht Ciub, who did the shooting. Smith was arraigned in Justice Stining's court this morning and committed for trial in consequence. Freeland says that he went to the club-house and while playing cards with Smith and Allen Engston, his helper, quarrelled with them. Smith drew a revolver and fired at both, striking Freeland's side and Engston's thigh. The latter was held as a witness.

Practice and Precept (From the Chicago Tribune.)
"Papa, that man over there is going to get his ride for nothing," said an observant little boy on a suburban train the other day; "he got on when we did and now he pretends like he was asleep.

The conductor's just gone by him." "He is not an honest man, my son," replied the father; 't cheating a railroad company is as bad as any other kind of cheating. I would rather see you in the cold ground, my boy, than to see you grow up to be a dishonest man. Remember—what the deuce are you stretching yourself up for? Crouch down in your seat, you jabbering idiot? The conductor's coming this way. Do you suppose I want to have to pay fare for you?"

Great Presence of Mind.

(From the Chicago Tribune.) Little Girl-Auntie, what is a nuisance ? Auntie-A nulsance, my dear, is something that others-that annoys-that gives trouble. Little Giri-I thought it was something else, I heard papa tell Mr. McCorkle last night that a nuisance from Swan Creek had come to visit us, and he was afraid she was going to stay—Papa (with great presence of mind)—Lucy, my child, you misunderstood me. What I said, Auntie, was that one of our newsy annis was making us a pleasant visit. Have another piece of turkey, Auntie?

A Little Absent-Minded. [From Pigaro.]

A very absent-minded doctor was dining out, and the hostess asked him to carve a leg of mutton. To the astonishment of the lady and her guests, he cut off a huge chunk of meat, then whipped out a lint bandage from his pocket, care-ully bound up the mutilated joint, and exclaimed enthusiastically:

"Beautiful! With care and repose the patient will now assuredly do well."
The laddes screamed, and left the table; and even the appetite of the gentleman visitors was destroyed for that repast.

What the Commission desired to know was how the acquiring of this road, the stock of which was worth not more than $50 per share, increased the value of the Government's lien for the payment of $250 per share for its stock and its subsequent lease to

Mr. Nichols desired to make what he called a clear and concise statement giving the history of the Central Branch, together with the cost of its construction, and, no objection being interposed, he proceeded to do so. At the time he became connected with the Atchison and Pike's Peak'in 1865'with Erastus Corning, R. M. Pomeroy. Chauncey Vibbard and others, Mr. Nichols said that its assets were 1,600 mortgage, 1,600 United States bonds and $1,000,000 in stock besides its lands.

passed by the last Legislature, which passsed by the last Legislature, which prohibits the giving away of prizes, premiums and chromos with articles of food. Recorder Gould affirmed the constitutionality of the law and the case will be made up before the General Terms, so that an appeal can be taken, at once, to the Court of Appeals.

It is claimed that the act abridges the privileges and immunities of citizens, deprives citizens of liberty and property, without dua process of law, and denies the equal protection of the laws to all citizens. It is unconstitutional also in that it transgresses the common law rights of citizens, interferes with freedom of trade and is oppressive and unfairly discriminating.

Wants to Increase the Police Navy. The Police Commissioners met this morning consider provisional estimates of the departme for next year. Mr. Voorbis advocated an priation for two iron steam launches for hi pairol, and a new iron schooner-rigged steam-boat, 150 feet long, with twin screws and a speed of nineteen miles an hour. The idea is to have a boat that can go one hundred miles to sea. Capt, Smith favors the proposition, on the ground that it costs so much to repaint and keep in order the Patrol that, in a few years the new boat-would pay for itself. The Police Com-missioners will wrestle with the Board of Appor-tionment this afternoon.

James F. Maynes, a beer bottler, of 417 West Sixteenth street, appeared this morning at Jefferon Market Court suffering from a stab wound in the right eye and a severe cut on the wrist. Has assailant was Stephen Devaney, a driver, seventeen years old, of 222 Gansevoort street. Trouble had been brewing between them for some time. On Sunday night they happened to meet in West Sixteenth street. One swore at the other, which soon resulted in a rough-and-tumble fight, during which Devaney drew a large pocket knife from his pocket and stabbed Haynes. Justice Ford committed Devaney to the Tombs to await trial in default of $2,500 ball.

White James Hogan, of 78 Carmine street, was drunk on the night of Oct. 20 he fell asleep in the hallway of the Yorktown Lodging-House, Thompson street. When he awoke the foll morning he found himself minus a coat, an overcoat and a pair of shoes. He learned through an old colored woman named Annie Preston that Katie Daly, twenty-four years old, a vagrant, had stolen the property, and had given it to Thomas M. Hale to pawn, Katie Daly and Hale were arrested last night. Justice Ford at Jefferson Market to-day held them each in $300 bail. A Dylug Woman Transferred. Ellen Trainor, the woman who attempted to drowd herself at the foot of Forty-fifth street, North River, and was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, was transferred to Bellevue at about midnight. She died an hour after her arrival at Bellevue. The woman lived with her brother, John Trainor, at No. 528 West Forty-fifth street.
